A Group of 17 Says Brazil Body Is Nazi Doctor

SAO PAULO - Forensic experts from three countries said Friday that they have identified the body of a man who drowned in Brazil six years ago as that of Josef Mengele, the Nazi war criminal.

JERUSALEM - Prime Minister Shimon Peres, seeking to close ranks with the United States in the TWA sirline hijacking case, called Friday for "organized and consisinternational responsibility to combat terrorism. In a speech to a meeting of the Zionist General Council, Mr. Peres invoked themes similar to those sounded in recent days by President Ronald Reagan, who has also called for stepped up efforts to fight international terrorism in response to the hijacking.

Mr. Peres also sought to link the TWA hijacking to terrorism by the Palestine Liberation Organization and to what he called an attempt by radical Shiite Moslems "to trans-form Lebanon into a Shiite Mos-lem country, to transform the Moslem world into a Shiite world, to jolt the stability of the Arab world and to remove from their path anyone who doesn't agree with them

Nixon's Campaign For Rehabilitation

For some time now, Richard M. Nixon, from his estate in Saddle River, New Jersey, has been reaching toward Washington in what associates say is a quiet but steady effort to construct an image as a wise adviser on current foreign and domestic issues, Gerald M. Boyd reports in The New York Times.

Mr. Nixon, who resigned the presidency 11 years ago because of the Watergate scandals, is moving slowly, knowing that going too public or seeking a prominent national role would almost certainly bring on a backlash and endanger what an associate called his "rehabilita-

Five years of record rains have hastened the erosion of the heights along the Mississippi River at Natchez, Mississippi, which boasts perhaps the best collection of pre-Civil War mansions in the South, most of them in the Greek Revival style. Several of the city's more than 300 antebellum dwellings are endangered. One of them, Weymouth Hall, is eight feet (about 2.5 meters) from the edge of a bluff 100 feet high. Gunman Eludes U.S. Security, Kills State Dept. Worker

WASHINGTON - A man carrying a folded rifle and a knife cluded heavy security at the State Department on Friday and shot to death a woman employee, who was apparently his mother, and then himself, about 100 feet from Secretary of State George P. Shultz's offices, police said.

Mr. Shultz was working in his office when the shootings occurred about noon.

Neither police nor State Depart-ment officials could explain how the gunman could breach the department's strict security measures, including metal detectors at every public entrance to the building, and go to the same floor where Mr. Shultz's suite is situated.

countries - looks at the present economic fault led to global financial crisis, it would crisis in the light of what happened in the 1930s. Its latest publication highlights the refusal, to date, of the Third World to default on its debt and resort to economic autarky, in strong contrast to prewar behavior. With varying degress of reluctance, the debtors have sought to restore credit worthiness by domestic stabilization programs and promotion of exports. Argentina has just demonstrated this forcibly in the program worked out with the much maligned IMF.

In Argentina's case it is the introduction of a new currency, the austral, that catches the eye, but this is only the tip of the iceberg. Knocking some noughts off the end of the price of a loaf will only make citizens respect their currency if more fundamental (and politically unpopular) things are done. The 1958 "new franc" currency reform in France was followed by a shrinkage of inflationary psychology, but only because the government was persuaded to accompany it by rigorous budget and monetary policy.

The solidity of the austral will similarly depend on the ability of the government to persevere with the courageous austerity measures adopted. This will not be easy. Any success will be won in the teeth of heavy opposition from the Peronist trade unions. who regard the government as a perpetual milch cow. But it is only by a massive reduction of the present tidal wave of inflation that Argentina can reverse the degradation of its naturally rich and fertile country. The freezing of prices and wages may help momentarily, but only as a stopgap.

The OECD's Development Center - tries to pursue the default option makes where the rich come closest to the poor sound economic sense. Whether or not deend any hope that renewed growth in the Third World would be buttressed by capital from the industrialized countries. Suggestions that they should now start to renege are less than helpful. Such advice confuses the nature of the debt problem. In particular, it does not distinguish enough between the obligation to pay interest and the obligation to repay the debt itself.

By and large, interest obligations have to be met if the source of lending is not to dry up. Lenders should be prepared, temporarily, to alleviate the burden by the partial transformation of interest obligations into capital (stretching the debt out over time) when interest rates are very high, or by special aid when the export earnings of debtors are temporarily low. But it is hard to see how international capital markets could continue to function efficiently if interest payments fell repeatedly behind schedule.

Repayment of the capital is a different matter. By and large, poor countries should not repay capital but refinance it when it falls due - and continue to incur debt to support worthwhile economic development,

Whether the big debtors can continue to attract new capital will depend on the effi-ciency with which they use it to develop industries that strengthen their international trade position. Continued hyperinflation is the archenemy of efficient development. This is why the Alfonsin initiative is so important. Austerity and the austral will not give Argentina a triple A credit rating overnight, but it is the only credible route.

Truman and Arms Fraud

"Down at Curtiss-Wright at the airplane plant in Ohio, they were putting defective motors in planes, and the generals couldn't seem to find anything wrong. So we went down, myself and a couple other senators, and we condemned more than four or five hundred of those engines. And I sent a couple of generals who'd been approving, who'd okayed those engines, to Leavenworth, and I believe they are still there. I certainly hope so."

So Harry Truman described to his biographer Merie Miller one of the many actions of his Senate committee that monitored defense production during World War II. The group made a major contribution by correcting fraud by contractors and mismanagement by the War and Navy Departments. It saved $15 billion, and the lives of many sailors and pilots who would otherwise have been sent into battle with defective weapons. Its diligence and evenhandedness thrust its chairman into the prominence from which he was chosen as Franklin Roosevelt's vice president.

Congress is again talking of the Truman committee. Not just from nostalgia but because the military spending surge under President Reagan has brought the same flaws.

Fraud by defense suppliers is rampant. Of the Pentagon's 100 largest contractors, 45 are under criminal investigation. Improper billing is widespread. Overcharging is endemic to the weapons-buying process, and flagrantly visible Grumman's $659 ashtray. Some Pentagon watchdogs bite their own side: Last week Charles Starrett, the head of the chief Pentagon auditing agency, was ordered fired for harassing an auditor who did his job too well.

The Pentagon gets quality as poor as the prices are high. Hughes Aircraft has supplied defective missiles for the army, the navy and the air force. McDonnell Douglas has provided F-18 fighters with cracked tails. Within the Defense Department a surplus of procurement officials design excessive features into every new weapon, degrading overall performance and raising cost until, like the Aquila robot plane, it can hardly stagger off the drawing board. Realistic tests are often avoided; the new M-1 tank and Bradley personnel carrier have not been fully tested for flammability in the face of live Soviet weapons. Misconceived weapons like the Sergeant York gun fail repeated tests yet cannot be stopped.

Harry Truman would have recognized all these problems, and the folly and greed that engender them. "If you were listening in on the Senate committee hearings of your dad," he wrote to his daughter, Margaret, on Oct. 1, 1941, "you would understand why old Diogenes carried a lantern in the daytime in his search for an honest man.

Truman found inspectors who were harassed for rejecting plane engines that leaked gasoline. He persuaded the navy not to reject out of hand a novel flying machine - Sikorsky's helicopter. His committee found tanks, just like today's, with weakness to flammability, and planes, just like today's, that carried no armor. He found that a contractor was knowingly making B-26 bombers with wings too short for stability, causing fatal crashes.

These abuses were committed in the shadow of a terrible war. Today's temptations are as great and the constraints on abuse are less pressing. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinnition of his failure to reform it the White House has appointed David Packard, a former deputy defense secretary, to head a blue-ribbon commission. Mr. Packard is unlikely to disappoint, but it will take months for his commission to report and act. Its work needs to be complemented by a congressional inquiry. There is every reason to welcome the bill from Representative Timothy Wirth that would revive the Truman committee. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

1910: Negro Burned by Dallas Mob NEW ORLEANS - A telegram from Dallas, Texas, states that a negro was burned at the stake there (on June 21) after confessing to the murder of a white girl. The sheriff with a number of soldiers was taking the man to the jail when 200 white people encountered the officers and succeeded in taking away the prisoner. The sheriff did not offer much resistance, but sent for reinforcements. Meanwhile the crowd had submitted the prisoner to excruciating torture and although he at first protested his innocence, he afterwards confessed to the murder of Miss Maude Redding, a white girl. A stake was prepared and the prisoner was soaked in paraffin and burned.

An example of this was Ivan Vladimirovich Michurin, who died two weeks ago. Michurin, 78 years old at his death, became a national figure more idolized by the Russians than Luther Burbank in America. During his more than sixty years of experimentation he is said to have developed more than 300 varieties of successful food plants. Scientific achievement such as Michurin's defies revolutions. Such work renders a whole nation grateful, whether it be red or white.

national terror, since attacks on Americans can be conducted with impunity. The outrage over the hi-jacking of TWA flight 847 may change that. America may finally be ready to retaliate. I propose a doctrine of disproportionate response.

Americans don't like disproporcionality. They are booked on fairness, and proportionality is its car-dinal principle. An eye for an eye. No more, no less. The notion of doing unto others as they do unto you comes with some authority.

In foreign policy, however, it also has limits, Some were apparent in Vietnam, where a policy of gradual escalation ("graduated response," it was called) produced not commensurate restraint on the other side but only stalemate at ever higher costs. Compare that with the classic demonstration of disproportionate force: in Poland, where a swift and overpowering show of force (it hard-ly had to be used) crushed the 10million-strong Solidarity movement in a week. The Soviets did the same in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

The Reagan administration had experience with this kind of over-whelming force in Grenada. It had experience also with the other kind in Beirut, where it deployed, with delicate and absurd proportionality. a garrison of "peacekeeping" ma-rines. The results are instructive.

In the state of nature that is the international arena, the principal restraint on the more lawless players is the fear of retaliation. If they can count on it being no worse than any contemplated violation, they are handed not only an incentive to violate, but the initiative, too. For it is they who then choose the level of violence, who dictate the rules and the nature of the engagement.

In general, proportionality is not a bad way to treat the world. But not when dealing with particularly law-less and nasty adversaries. TWA flight 847 brings us face to face with the nastiest: people who kidnap Americans by the planeload; who torture and murder a passenger for the shape of his (presumably military) crew cut; who select, as last did the Nazis, other passengers for especially harsh treatment on the basis of their (presumably Jewish) surnames. Proportionality is no way to do business with such people. If the kidnapping and murder of American air passengers is not to

You Don't Outwit Thugs By Gratifying the Beast

WASHINGTON—In the 1974 wisiting violence on a fuzzy target would be a handsome tribute to terexchange has Charles Bronson, containing the second se playing upstanding citizen turned vigilante, posing a tough old ques-tion. What do you call it, he asks angrily (he has just buried his mur-dered wife) when the law's restraints play into the hands of thugs? "Civization," his son-in-law answers. Civilization, which includes innocent passage among its basic values.

Is there not a duty to be as crafty as terrorists?

makes terrorism both possible and makes terrorism both possible and tempting. Terror, in turn, tempts civilization to betray those values. The hijacking of flight 847 brings out the longing to hit back and hit back hard. It would gratify the beast in everyone to "make a crater of West Beirut" or of the Shifter "train-insteadors" in the Bakes and Bay.

Washington Is Right to Keep Its Cool terest in denying its use to terrorists.

Of course this hurts the tourist trade. The Greek government might have thought of that before allowing Athens to become notorious as a place where terrorists can operate without much risk.

The would-be hijacker who missed TWA flight 847 was promptly exchanged for Greek passengers without any sign of care for others aboard, including American tourists, nor apparently any effort at interrogation that might have re-vealed the origin of the plot and helped find a way of dealing with it. But what remains is less to assign blame than to figure out what is possible, what might help unravel the secretive politics of those who expect to benefit, and what risks prolonging the crisis.

In this there is a lesson to be learned from the Tehran ordeal, and it concerns primarily the media. The press and television are made into accessories, unwitting but nonetheless important, when the main objective of the crime is to attract attention, humiliate and outrage as many people as possible so as to claim pre-eminence among militants. Developments have to be reported, but it is vital to avoid dramatizing, exacerbating, provoking the very feelings that the perpetrators of the plot seek to exploit.

There is not much else to be done. Mr. Reagan has had to learn and encourage a patience and discretion that he criticized five years ago. So must the rest of us. It is the hardest contribution to make toward an acceptable solution and it is incumbent most of all on those of us who distribute news and express opinions. Having said many sensible things at his news conference Tuesday evening, Mr. Reagan went out to Indiana the next day and declared that the United States would never "cave in" to the hijackers. The Jaycees waved flags, stomped their feet and chanted, "USA! USA!"

What, if anything, did it mean?
The identification of discussion or, negotiation, or even compromise, with "caving in" is beside the point when one is dealing with politically enraged people who hold hostages. "Mindless" is the word we often (mindlessly) associate with terror-ism, but it is a journalistic-political word, not one that flows from informed analysis of the thing itself.

Terrorism is sometimes mindless. often not. Not only is it calibrated to. play upon and exploit civilized val-ues and vulnerabilities, it is often rooted in political or religious views that are not mindless in the sense of being immume to reason or analysis.

The people who study terrorism professionally do not use the term. They view terrorism as a phenomenon of this world about which, as about all sorts of unpleasant things, there is much to be observed and learned, and to which there can be an artful response. Behind the scenes, there must be some negotiation. But in public we seem to be demanding of the hijackers what they usually demand at first - "unconditional surrender." It has been a troublesome idea ever since Ulysses S. Grant thought of it, in a Civil War campaign about a century and a quarter ago. "Uticonditional surrender" has not always served civilization well. Policy for an Evolving Poland Needs More Carrots Than Sticks

By F. Stephen Larrabee

N EW YORK — The sentencing last week of three Solidarity leaders - Adam Michnik, Bogdan Lis and Wladyslaw Frasynink prison terms of two and a half to three and a half years for "disturbing the public order" has again called attention to the imresolved political situation in Poland. The sentences raise difficult questions about policy toward Poland — about whether or not sanctions and other retaliatory measures should be applied. But before the United States reacts with new retaliatory measures, it ought to step back and assess its longterm interests in Poland.

America has two basic interests in Poland: to encourage movement toward a more open and pluralistic society and to reduce Poland's dependence on the Soviet Union. It should not shy away from an activist policy that is designed to further these ends, but the effort should be sophisticated and farsighted effort, with carrots as well as sticks. During the last 30 years American policy has played an important role in the liberalization of Polish society. Despite the crackdown in December 1981. Poland remains a more open society than any country in the Eastern bloc except Hungary. General Wojciech Jaruzelski has outlawed Solidarity, but he has been unable to reverse the effect of its brief flowering on the consciousness of the nation. A counterculture thrives in Poland, supported by hundreds of underground journals, and the reernment, there is debate about how to institutionalize the de facto phiralism that has emerged in recent years. The population of Poland remains strongly sympathetic to the United States, despite Warsaw's propagan-da. (Recent Polish government polls show that Ronald Reagan is the secunderground journals, and the re-gime is powerless to stamp it out. Even among supporters of the gov- important to avoid taking actions

The Will to Resist Thrives in Poland

WHAT is astonishing about Poland is that people who face arrest, prison, loss of employment and torture manage to sustain a spirit of resistance. After a Mass I attended recently, hundreds of churchgoers spontaneously began to sing and raise their hands in the forbidden "V" symbol of Solidarity. People freely telephone one another to keep up on news of the underground Oppositionists hold regular social gatherings in their homes.

As an American active in the peace movement, I was interested in the underground's attitude toward the peace issue. For years the Polish opposition has been mistrustful, often hostile, toward the Western peace movemen recently there has been a noticeable thaw. There are still differences, but the underground press now publishes sympathetic articles about the Western peace movement and Solidarity writers have made proposals, similar to those from the West European movement, for a demilitarized Central Europe.

Joanne Landy, co-director of the Campaign for Peace and Democracy, East and West, a New York-based organization, writing in The New York Times.

that would undermine this sympathy or reduce American influence. Lech Walesa and church leaders have advised against imposing new sanctions, since these would burt the Polish people more than the govern-ment. Their words should be heeded. Also to be avoided are actions that would reduce either the U.S. diplomatic presence in Poland or scientific and cultural ties. These are among and cultural ties. I nese are among the few instruments that America has for exerting its influence and main-taining ties to important groups in the Polish population. Reducing such links between Poles and Americans would only play into the hands of hard-liners in Warsaw and Moscow. And once the links have been cut they can be hard to restore.

Nor should Washington withdraw support for Poland's entry into the IMF. Polish membership would en-hance Western leverage and increase pressure for reform of the Polish economy — a clear prerequisite, among other things, for any long-term solution to domestic political difficulties. It might also make some of the difficult austerity measures required for economic reform more palatable to the Polish people. In short, the need is for a policy, that includes incentives as well as threats. The Jaruzelski government must see that it has a choice.

Economic levers, especially credits, can play a role. Warsaw desperately needs new credits to service its large foreign debt (estimated to be about $24 billion) and prevent further eco-j: nomic decline. Together with its West European allies, the United States should make clear that extension of new credits would be tied to a mean-ingful reform of the economy. Short of that, as Lech Walesa and others have noted, the money will simply be wasted and do little to alleviate Poland's serious economic plight.

America's ability to influence events in Poland is limited. But a policy that included carrots as well as sticks would be most likely to encourage the Januzelski government to change course while preserving American ties to the Polish people.

Uruguay's Jailers Won't Be Forgotten

WASHINGTON — Writing in his prison cell saved his sanity, Hiber Conteris remembers. A journalist, professor of literature, former Methodist pastor and father of three children, he was a prisoner of conscience for eight years and four months in Uruguayan jails. Mr. Conteris was beaten and tortured after his arrest by the military government's security police in De-cember 1976. He was hung from his wrists and tortured by repeated dunking into water mixed with vomit, urine and blood. In March of this year he was released in a general amnesty grant-ed by Uruguay's new civilian government. Last week he visited Washington as a free man, ecstatically embracing life's simple delights - a meal with friends, a walk on open avenues with no guarded looks for security police. Mr. Conteris came to thank personally the coalition of protest -26 senators, 83 House members, human rights advocates and groups like the Committee to Protect Journalists — that kept up the pressure against his unjust imprisonment.

His survival is the story of two forces: the moral force used by the gan as a nonviolent resistance force victim, a student of Gandhi, to con-vince his jailers that his spirit could not be broken, and the political force marshaled by relatives to keep his plight from being forgotten. These are days — years, really — when human rights victories are rare. Amnesty International, which adopted Mr. Conteris as a prisoner of conscience, documented governmental torture in 98 countries last year. In many of them, torture is "a tool of state policy."

It was that way in Uruguay in 1976 when Mr. Conteris returned from a peace conference in Europe. Security police jammed a hood over his head and took him from Montevideo airport to intelligence headquarters. Under a "law of state security and internal order" he was charged with such crimes as "illegal association" and "assault upon the Constitution." A military court sentenced him to 15 years in prison. He had been marked by the goverament because in the 1960s he was aligned with the Movement of National Liberation. The group beagainst the military dictatorship and had wide public support. When it turned to armed guerrilla tactics, Mr. Conteris was one of many who left. That was in June 1970. Six years later, in retroactive harass-ment, the military took him away.

Last week in Washington he enjoyed a sunny afternoon to distance himself from the raw hate he endured for eight years. He is still thin from his imprisonment, but all else his warm humor, scholarly mind and sheer gratefulness for merely being alive - are incarnations of the hope he never let die.

A unique cruelty of prison life was the mental torture. Mr. Conteris recalls that psychologists were employed to find ways of breaking nates' minds. One of 6,000 political prisoners during those years, he defended his sanity by writing. After a time he was allowed paper and pen and would write eight hours a day. On release in March he had produced four novels, a collection of short stories and two plays. He is soon to meet American publishers to get them into print. The prison literature of the 20th century is about to get a stunning addition. Washington Post Writers Group.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bad News Getting Worse

As a longtime subscriber, I recall As a longtime subscriber, I recall the days of the early 1960s when I enjoyed reading your newspaper from first page to last. In recent years its tidings have become more and more disturbing: wars, famines, pestilence, drug abuse, wanton murders, terrorism, "fundamentalism" around the world. I have learned to ignore the front page and console myself the front page and console myself with the observations of Russell Baker. He does not observe often enough. For bad news, your issue of June 18, with the reports of the TWA hijacking will be hard to beat. Such lack of passenger and hand-luggage control is inconceivable. "Purser Re-lates Hijackers' Search for Jews." And the indomitable White House spokesman, Larry Speakes, says Na-bih Berri "certainly has control over the situation." The White House, in any case, certainly does not. Washington blew it by failing to act when the plane landed in Algiers. The simple way to stamp out terrorism is to take no prisoners.

RAYMOND LIPSON. Lugano, Switzerland, Presidency Up for Grabs

Tom Wicker is a fine political commentator. I have been a delegate to the last three Democratic conventions, yet I have to confess that he seems to make a convincing case (in "The U.S. Presidency: Republican for Good?" June 19) that the Republicans have taken over the White House for a long time, chiefly because the Democratic Party has lost the middle ground in national politics.

But then I got out my copy of "The Parties: Republicans and Democrats in This Century," the 1978 book of another commentator, Henry Fairlie, who said the opposite. "The simple fact is that the Republican Party, in the 44 years since it was first defeated by Franklin Roosevelt, has shed the character which it previously had, but found no other character which the majority of the people can smell, feel, taste, know, enjoy." Trying to communicate a picture of the Republican Party. Mr. Fairlie wrote, was like trying "to breathe some animal life into a pile of bleached bones."

Those bones put themselves back together into a pretty formidable piece of animal life. Things change fast in politics, which is a cyclical thing. The signs are now coming thick and fast that the Reagan magic is fading, and with it the cement that it. restored the Republicans as a national party. The White House in 1988 is up for grabs and the Republicans

The museum also bought a jade pendant of the 4th century B.C. with twisted fluting and the head of a snarling animal, both reflecting the influence of Achaemenid art from Iran. The object is marvelous; so is the price reportedly paid. $47,000.

The success of this exhibition and of Sotheby's sale of the Hucollection contrasts so strongly with the failure of the Tai Founda tion pieces as to seem at first to make no sense. The Times of London commented that the illicit dig-ging of the past two years or so had flooded the market for early ceramics and that the continuing drop in prices in this area of the Chinese market had affected all the others The paper concluded that "only the market for Chinese export porcelain seems relatively unaffected." But neither the Chinese-taste por-celain sold so brilliantly in Sotheby's New York sale nor Eskenazi's. Shang bronzes fall into that categothe legs and the runny glaze. A magnificent Longquan cela-don vase that sold for £27,500, below Sotheby's low estimate, seems cheap only because the estimate was absurdly high. The vase is fine & ly potted but its glaze is too thin and it has a craquelure, which no collector wants in Longquan porcelain, sought after for the jadelike smoothness of a pale green glaze that is supposed to be much thicker than on this piece. Clearly, the plague of the Chi-nese market, which is perhaps the soundest of all existing markets, along with Impressionist and 20th Century Masters, is not a surfeit of works. If it has a problem, it is overestimation, a tendency that has characterized the suction market across the board in recent months. That would seem to account for Sotheby's performance on the Tail Foundation sculptures in New York, A Buddha schist head of the 6th century, knocked down at $50,000, failed to sell because its nose had been recut at the base and surface damage was poorly con-cealed by fillings. It comes nowhere near being worth Sotheby's esti-mate of $80,000 to $100,000. A top

"There's a great deal to be said: about the contrasting quality of children's fantasies reflected in the 1939 MGM film Wizard of Oz. with its dauntlessly optimistic attention to the characters' innermost frailties, and in 'Return to Oz, a more outer-directed adventure that attempts a 'Star Wars' spirit. This Dorothy, who has nothing like the spunk and resourcefulness Judy Garland brought to the role, is nonetheless cast as a conquering adventuress in an alien empire: since she never stops to marvel at the mysteries of this new place, neither can you. And the effervescent helpfulness that united Dorothy and her friends in the earlier film has now become the mere sense of a shared mission. Oz itself, formerly a never-neverland existing somewhere in Dorothy's and the audience's shared imagination, now resembles any old extraterres-

Sheila Benson writes in the Los Angeles Times: "It must have taken a tremendous strength of vision to resist duplicating the first film, but these vistas and characters are not only breathtakingly faithful to the original spirit of Oz, they are beautiful on their own. Yet Return to Oz' does not soar when it so clearly should."

Recovery: Supply-Side Policy Or Budget-Deficit Stimulus?

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service

EW YORK - Was the economic recovery of 1983-84 the result of the Reagan administration's supply-side policies or of the Keynesian stimulus resulting from big budget deficits? Wallace C. Peterson and Paul S. Estenson of the University of Nebraska contend that, despite its supply-side rhetoric, the substantive economic policies of the administration became Keynesian after the deep recession of 1981-82, which threatened President Ronald Reagan with outright failure on the economic front.

Writing in the summer issue of the Journal of Post-Keynesian Economics, the Nebraska economists maintain that "substantive evidence that favors

the Keynesian view of the 1983 rebound.

Reaganomics." by cutting taxes and sharply increasing government spending. "took advantage of a simple but empirically valid principle, namely, that government deficits stimulate economic activity." Tax cuts and climbing military outlays, they say, led first to increased consumption and then to an investment surge. They insist that it was not an investment-led recovery; as the supply-siders maintain. In the first quarter of the 1983 recovery, they calculate nonresidential fixed investment actually retarded the recovery of the gross national product by 6.38 percent. While this was a less severe restraint on growth than during the average recovery, they deny that a negative effect of investment can be described as an investment-led recovery; consumption and housing expendi-tures, aided by declining interest rates, provided the lead and business investment followed.

The major factor in the recovery, they argue, was fiscal stimulus, as measured by the so-called high-employment budget deficit. That concept is used by economists as a measure of what the hudget deficit would be if the economy were operating at a

As now used by the Commerce Department, the standardized level of unemployment is set at 6 percent of the labor force. A bigger high-employment deficit implies greater fiscal stimulus; a lower deficit or surplus implies less stimulus or greater restraint.

N THE first quarter of 1981, the high-employment budget deficit was $21.2 billion. It varied in succeeding quarters but was still only $26.3 billion in the second quarter of 1982. Then, as the Reagan tax cuts took effect, it soared to $106.1 billion by the fourth quarter of 1982. Mr. Peterson and Mr. Estenson find that the behavior of the high-employment deficit during the recovery "provides evidence which strongly favors a Keynesian interpretation of the rebound from recession." Keynesian interpretation of the rebound from recession.

Despite the recovery, however, the high-employment deficit has continued to climb. It reached $155.7 billion in the last quarter of 1984. This, the authors note, should not have happened if the Laffer curve had worked and lower tax rates had increased national income and tax revenues enough to shrink the deficit.

The high-employment deficit hit a postwar peak annual rate of $156.6 billion in the first quarter of 1985. The Bureau of Economic Analysis of the Commerce Department, using the administra-tion's budget projections, estimated that the high-employment deficit will decline to $133.6 billion in the fourth quarter of this year and to $129.9 billion — the last quarter for which it has published an estimate — in the third quarter of 1986. Does this imply a drag on the economy or simply a moderate reduction in the degree of fiscal stimulus?

The answer appears to be the latter, with high-employment budget deficits above $100 billion still in prospect for the next three years even if the administration and Congress get the budget cuts they are seeking, and if the changes in the tax laws now being debated do not result in further tax cuts. Does the persistence of high-employment deficits insure against another recession? That seems unlikely. The deficits

But the bid must also be approved by the Federal Communications Commission because it involves the change of ownership of broadcast licenses of local televi-sion and radio stations owned by

And the Justice Department's antitrust division must decide whether merging CBS with Turner Broadcasting would comply with antitrust laws.

Mr. Turner, who wants control of 67 percent of CBS stock, has said he will not buy any shares until he obtains FCC approval to acquire CBS's local stations.

The CBS management, which opposes the takeover, has asked the FCC to conduct a hearing at which documents and witnesses can be subpoensed before making a deci-

NEW YORK - The dollar drifted generally lower Friday despite an unexpected rise in the U.S. money supply, when dealers evened out their positions ahead of the weekend.

Traders said business was light after the close of the markets in Europe. "There was profit-taking as a very tired market squared up their positions," said a New York bank

In Europe, the dollar was mixed as market expectations of a cut in the U.S. discount rate - the fee charged by the Federal Reserve on loans to member commercial banks - faded and a wave of selling by profit-tak-ers undermined Thursday's

Sliding Oil Prices Are Jeopardizing Mexico's Economic Recovery Plans

By William A. Orme Jr. MEXICO CITY - Falling

world oil prices are disrupting Mexico's delicately balanced economic recovery plans, pushing inflation up and the peso down while forcing the government to impose emergency spending cuts.

If oil prices continue to slide, experts here predict. Mexico and its creditors will be forced to re-turn to the bargaining table to lighten the country's debt-servic-ing load. The debt problem has retreated into the background since Mexico and its banks agreed on a $48-billion, 14-year rescheduling last March.

In a statement issued last weekend, the government point-edly noted that for "some heavily indebted exporting countries like Mexico, an abrupt drop in oil prices would have serious repercussions on their capacity to pay and therefore, on international finances as a whole."

Mexico surrendered to pres-sure from clients this week and cut its heavy-oil price for June by $1.50 a barrel, a reduction that the government said will cut $290 million from its "budgeted income" this year. International oil company executives, while welcoming the reduction, termed it "an intermediate step" toward further expected price cuts, "If Pemex wants to stay competitive in Europe and Japan, they will have to come down $2,50 or $3 a barrel," one executive said of the state oil concern.

The government, which has not published export figures since April, said that its oil revenue from January to May was $330 million less than anticipat-ed. Independent analysts, how-

Exports slowed to 1.3 million barrels a day in May and fell below a million barrels daily in the first half of June, industry sources estimate. This brings the average for this year to about 1.36 million barrels a day. That is about 200.000 barrels a day less than the 1.56 million-barrel aver-

Bids $3.7 Billion For Supply Firm

Baxter Travenol

EVANSTON, Illinois - In an apparent upset of a merger plan announced in April, Baxter Travenol Laboratories Inc. offered Friday to acquire American Hospital Supply Corp., the largest U.S. distributor of hospital supplies, in a transaction worth an indicated $3.7

American Hospital said it re-ceived a letter from Baxter Tra-venol, a major U.S. pharmaceuticals concern, proposing the merger. The Baxter offer comes nearly three months after American reached a definitive agreement to merge with Hospital Corporation of America, based in Nashville, Tennessee, in a move that would greate the largest health on the corporation of the corporation create the largest health care com-

HCA had no immediate comment of the Baxter proposal, but a spokesman pointed out that. "We do have a definitive agreement to merge" with American Hospital.

American said it was not clear how Baxter's offer would be affect-ed if American and HCA were to proceed with their planned merger. The announcement Friday came several hours after American Hospital asked that trading in its stock on the New York Stock Exchange be suspended. Trading was later resumed and American Hospital shares closed up $2.625, at $37. Baxter Travenol shares lost 75 cents, to close at $15.875, while Hospital Corp. shares gained 87½ cents, to $47.50.

Karl D. Bays, chairman and chief executive officer of American Hospital, said the merger proposal came in a letter from Vernon R. Loucks, president and chief executive officer of Baxter Travenol, which is based in Deerfield, Illi-

Slower Profit Growth Is Seen for Japan Firms

TOKYO - Growth in the profits of Japanese corporations is expected to slow in the year ending March 31, 1986, according to surveys by two leading Japanese research organizations

Yamaichi Research, an affiliate of Yamaichi Securities Co. Ltd... estimated Friday that profit growth would average 8.7 percent during the year, sharply down from 26.2 percent in fiscal 1985.

Daiwa Securities Research Insti-tute Ltd., which is affiliated with Daiwa Securities Co., predicted that profit growth will average 5.4 percent in fiscal 1986, sharply down from 27 percent last year. The Yamaichi survey covered 415 companies in 28 industries but excluded insurance, gas and banks and other financial institutions. Yamaichi attributed the slower rate of profit growth to an antici-

AMERICAN HOSTAGES IN IRAN: The Conduct of a Crisis

A Council on Foreign Relations Book. 443 pages. $25.

Yale University Press, 302 Temple Street, New Haven, Conn. 06520.

Reviewed by Bernard Gwertzman

TT IS now more than six years since the Shah of I Iran fell and four years since the American hostage crisis ended. To the significant literature on Iran already published in recent years, two excellent books have been added. Gary Sick's narrative about U.S. relations with Iran, "All Fall Down," covers not only the hostage crisis but the flailing around in Washington and Tehran in the closing months of 1978 as the shah's power began to slip.

Sick, a Navy captain who was the Iran expert on the National Security Council, has written a taut, dramatic account. His narrative moves easily through the debate over whether the shah should have been admitted to the United States, covers the seizure of the U.S. Embassy on Nov. 4, 1979, and concludes with the negotiations before the hostages were released on President Ronald Reagan's inauguration day, Jan. 20, 1981.

Because of the frustrations in dealing with Iran in 1978-80, the normal differences within government were strained to breaking point. President Jimmy Carter's policies fluctuated between the "hard line" of Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser, and the various approaches put forth by the State Department, led by Cyrus R. Vance. Sick was an intimate adviser and a friend of Brzezinski; not surprisingly, his judgments on most key issues sup-port Brzezinski more than they do his detractors.

In "All Fall Down," and in the chapter he contributes to the compendium of articles published by the Council on Foreign Relations, Sick endorses the rescue mission in April 1980, which was advocated by Brzezinski and led Vance to resign.

"The rescue mission was a failure," Sick con-cludes in "All Fall Down," "but it was a failure of military execution, not of political judgment or

But there are clearly some players, in Sick's view, who had it less right than others. The most acrimonious debate over Iran in Washington has been whether anything could have been done to prevent the coming to power of the radical, anti-American Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini; whether, for instance, the shah should have cracked down on his opponents in late 1978, as advocated by Brzezinski.

Sick argues that William H. Sullivan, the last U.S. ambassador to Iran, was undermined not because of policy disagreements but because he had lost the confidence of the White House by his freewheeling actions.

The articles in "American Hostages in Iran," which covers the hostage crisis alone, is invaluable for any historian dealing with the negotiations leading up to the release of the Americans. It includes an examination of how the Carter administration froze billions of dollars in Iranian funds that had been invested in U.S. banks and institutions, how the administration tried to impose a worldwide trade embargo on the Iranians and how the assets were unfrozen in exchange for the hostages' release.

This uneven book also includes two chapters by Harold H. Saunders, the senior State Department official involved with Iran throughout the period of the two books. Saunders was close to Vance, and if Sick gives a sympathetic portrayal of Brzezinski's views, Saunders does the same for Vance. Saunders also describes the daily torment felt in Washington by those in the State Department trying to free the

"The issue for many of us was at its roots how nations — and the human beings who lead them — can most effectively deal with each other." Saunders writes. The two men reflected different approaches. It was not mainly that Zbig Brzezinski was more concerned with national interest and honor, while

Something that shakes you out of your sporting reverie and causes you to reflect for just ment on the universal brotherhood of ma and the one truth that sports can teach us all: If you've got the time, we've got the beer. Kevin Koch, 31, who had been the Pittsburgh Pirates' Parrot since 1979, quit his job recently. Joe O'Took, a team vice president, said that Koch cited personal reasons. "He said he feels that he has been the parrot for seven years and he said he didn't want to be the parrot forever," O'Toole said.

Seven years on the job and Koch was already,

Alas, feather fatigue.

A brilliant career over at 31. Being a parrot is obviously a young man's game. (I am told that the beak is first to go.) But, friends, let me ask you something: Why did the Pittsburgh Pirates have a parrot for a mascot in the first place?

The only connection I see is that in those pirate movies the pirates often have parrots on their shoulders. But what kind of reasoning is that? Who cares what is on a shoulder? Do we need mascots dressed as shoulder pads? Or shoulder bags? Or dandruff? Why not have a Pirate?

Or am I missing something, and is "parrot" the way they pronounce "pirate" in Pittsburgh? We have too many birds in sports as it is. Orioles. Blue Jays. Hawks. Seahawks. Jayhawks. Falcons. Eagles. Cardinals. Gamecocks. Peneuins. Gobbiers. Owls. Red Wings. Mud Hens. Fighting Blue Hens.

And look at what he started. I will grant you that the Phillie Phanatic is good. But do we really need him? Or her as the case may be? (How could you tell?)

California Duel in a Pool Pits Two of World's Best

By John Weyler

Los Angeles Times Service MISSION VIEJO, California — It could have been a scene straight out of a western movie. The friendly rivals — the two fastest alive sat across from one another, calmly planning the big showdown. There was no discussion of .44s at high noon, though, when swim-mers Alex Baumann and Jens-Peter Berndt met while competing in -Montreal earlier this spring and decided when and where it would be. This showdown would be precisely 400 meters — 100 meters of each of the four swimming strokes — dur-ing the Speedo Swim Meet of Champions at the Mission Viejo international complex.

That meet began Thursday and continues through Sunday, with the 400-meter individual medley, showdown time for Baumann and Berndt, to be held Saturday. Baumann, of Canada, is the 1984 Olympic gold medalist and world record-holder in the 400 individual medley. Berndt is the celebrated East German defector and former bold record-holder in the same

"Alex said to me, 'Hey, Peter, what race can we do this sum-Berndt said, "And I suggested we race at Speedo. In Canaof shape because the whole year had been pretty bad for me. Since record he had devoted a lifetime to my defection, the rhythm of my training was pretty bad." Berndt, who walked away from his East German teammates at the airport in Oklahoma City last January, enrolled at the University of Alabama, went through a battle with the NCAA over eligibility and is spending the summer with a fam-ily in Mission Viejo while he trains with the Mission Vieio Nadadores. Neither swimmer is predicting a world record, but the times should be more than respectable for this normally relaxed meet. Still, the race could be memorable. If Baumann and Berndt spend too much time worrying about each other, Ricardo Prado, who won the Olympic silver for Brazil, or Rob Woodhouse, who took the bronze for Australia, could easily steal the show from the showdown.

"It's something very special, I admitting that Baumann is the best think," Berndt said. "Anytime individual medley swimmer ever. you've got the four top-ranked swimmers in the world in one race, it's exciting. Alex and I decided on this race as a showdown, but now knows - he can beat him. you've got four medal winners or record-holders. Anything can hap-pen in sports. I'm looking forward to it."

Baumann agreed that Saturday's event carries special significance. "I'm approaching it a bit more seriously than you normally would in a meet like this," he said. "Tve rested a bit in preparation and I might even shave" his body. "I don't think anyone will be going 4:17"—his world record is 4:17.41

- "but it's going to be a great race... like the Olympics with the Eastern bloc there too." Berndt, of course, is no longer of the Eastern bloc. He is, in fact, the new kid on the western block. And although his training schedule may be just getting back into shape, his tan is already world class.

"This is more fun than school," Berndt said, flashing a huge grin. "You just work out and then do what you want. I've gotten four or five weeks of real good training in. The beach was a little cloudy today.

There are few clouds on Berndt's horizon. He is more convinced than ever that he made the right move when he slipped away from his friends and a privileged — if some-what restricted — life in East Ger-

Mets Sweep Cubs on Grand Slam; Race Tightens

NEW YORK - In a season dominated by anomalies, the New York Mets have swept a series that just may put them back on course.

After a fast start put the Mets atop the National League East Di-vision standings, the relief pitching turned to hearthurn, batting averages sank and earned-run averages rose. This misery culminated in three straight losses in Montreal last weekend that dropped the New Yorkers to fourth place.

Then it was back home to Shea Stadium to play the Chicago Cubs in a four-game series. The same Cubs who won 12 of 18 games against the Mets last season.

On Thursday night, George Fos-ter hit his 12th major league grand-slam home run in the third inning and rookie John Christensen followed with a bases-empty homer to give the Mets a 5-3 victory and a series sweep. The loss was the ninth straight for Chicago, its longest slump since dropping 13 straight in

With division-leading Montreal also losing, New York and St. Louis now are only a half-game out of first with Chicago two games

"A sweep is great after what the Cubs did to us last year," said the Mets' manager, Dave Johnson. This takes away the psychological edge the Cubs had."

The Cubs, who had scored just one run in the first three games of the series, again discovered that it only takes one mistake to lose a ball

With two outs in the bottom of the third, Kelvin Chapman singled and Ray Knight — batting third and .155 — followed with a grounder that shortstop Chris Speier bobbled for his third error of the series. Ray Fontenot walked Gary Carter on four pitches to load

Hurdler Moses Again Injures Knee

LOS ANGELES (LAT) - Edwin Moses, the incomparable 400-meter hurdler and world record holder, reinjured his right knee in training last week and will not be ready to compete again until August, according to Gordon Baskin, his business manager.

"Last week was the first time he has been able to go over a hurdle this season, and he popped something in his knee." Baskin said. "He has been able, though, to run on the flat. If he isn't careful, he could be out for the just crossed my desk. It's titled Sex as a Sublimation for Tennis" (Workman Press. $4.95) and was written by Theodor Saretsky, a Freudian specialist at Adelphi University and full-time tennis fanatic. Saretsky told me on the phone, "It was Freud who first wrote that 'all human beings are motivated by a primal lust ich translates itself into the endless and fruitless search for an unused tennis court on the weekend."

Saretsky said he lucked into all of Freud's writings on the subject when he Buchwald bought a trunk at a tennis memorabilia sale at Sotheby's in 1980. The trunk contained some of the master's greatest work, including "The Myth of the Sweet Spot, "Interpretation of Tennis Dreams." The Primitive Taboo of the Foot Fault" and "The Nightmare of the Canceled Tennis Game: A Study in Obesity, Perversion and Suicide."

This year Saretsky decided to share this gold mine with the pub-

The professor said one of his most fascinating discoveries was that Freud lost interest in the sex act when he discovered that a tennis game lasted much longer.

Saretsky has found Freud's theories invaluable because more and more patients are coming to him with tennis problems rather than sexual ones. Up until recently experts in the psychoanalytical profession refused to accept tennis court mental cases because they were too difficult to cure.

"The hardest thing for a patient with a tennis neurosis or psychosis is to find an analyst who will take the time to treat him." Saretsky said. "Freud discovered the more a patient talked about his deep-seated tennis problems the more anxious the analyst was to go out on the court and hit a few balls himself. This attitude is diametrically opposed to how the analyst feels when he listens to a patient talk about sexual dysfunction."

Saretsky says, "Freud took one WASHINGTON — A very re-vealing book about tennis has of the great steps in modern analysis by stating categorically, The only way to know one's patients is to play tennis with them."

I don't have the space here to reveal everything that Professor Saretsky says Freud said about tennis, but I can print a few highlights. One is that Freud observed that individuals who immerse themselves in work and who stress family obligations and engage in extensive sexual activity, to the point where they are prevented from playing sufficient tennis, will suffer from severe tension anxiety and nosebleeds.

Another is that people who are constantly measuring the height of the net have a paranoidal delusion that the net is higher on their side

When a distinguished colleague W. W. Wilner, after years of research, arrived at the conclusion that tennis spelled backwards was "sin-net" it confirmed Freud's scientific theory that there are murky, mysterious forces buried alive in the human psyche.

As soon as he checked it out Freud rejected his own classical view of infant sexuality as the mainspring of the human condition and replaced it with the dictum that "tennis truths lie everywhere; they are the essence of being."

This led him to devote the remaining years of his life to studying the lingering fantasy of the empty

Saretsky believes that Freud's tennis writings undermined all or-thodox thought in the Western world. The Viennese doctor exposed the offensive lob for what it really was, a sadistic underhanded shot of which he wrote, "The lob must be given its chance, but this is a disgusting stroke to use in mixed company if its sexual and exhibitionist roots are not honestly acknowledged and properly ana-

In conclusion, if you buy only one book this summer, I would recommend "Sex as a Sublimation for Tennis." If you don't play the game yourself you could save the life of someone who does. A Poet's 'Sound of Sobbing' for Vietnam

Tran Nhu, a friend and former fellow prisoner of Thien, said from his home in Kansas that Thien was born in Hanoi in June 1933, the youngest of five chil-dren. Thien's father had been an engineer for the French before the victory of the Vietminh in 1954. The family thought of moving south. They got only as far as the port city of Haiphong.

Thien's friends knew him in the 1940s and '50s as bright, witty, shy with girls and loyal to his friends. He had, they said, an extraordinary memory for verse. In 1958 Thien and other young writers in Haiphong decided to start a literary magazine. North Vietnam's leaders had recently in-augurated a Chinese-style "100 flowers" campaign and more free expression than usual was in the air. One day Thien approached Haiphong's cultural officials and asked permission to publish a journal that would be called Vi

On April 2, 1979, during a brief period of freedom, he made a desperate attempt to find a wider audience for his poems. He was living in Haiphong. Having made up his mind to send his poems abroad, he went to the British Embassy in Hanoi and handed copies of them to a British diplomat.
